Come November and the preholiday entertaining days, most hostesses I know begin looking frantically for gourmet recipe books, aspirin, and a quiet spot in which to search their messories, trying to remember whether it was the chicken that Aunt Mary loved so—or was that the night she tactfully tried to make it clear that it was lovely, of course, but she'd prefer anything else in the world next visit—and whether the Jonese were the ones who didn't eat fish—or was that just on Fridays!

The only cool and collected host of my acquaintance is also the most efficient one. He has solved the formidable problem of what-to-serve with what he calls his Menu Memory Book. Joh if you will, he tells me, but it really works. What he does is this He begins with a loose-leaf notebook, listing menus tested as lone evenings for taste and go-togetherness. He now has never than thirty separate menus, all carefully numbered, accompanied by the corresponding recipes and preparation time for each dish. Then in another section of his book he has his People List. Glancing through it one day I noticed a few estries: "Cousin Sue: No. 5, September 4—likes steak medium rare." "Fred: No. 3, September 27—loved it." "Mary: No. 18, October 9—blanches when the lamb is pink." "Mrs. Colling." October 12—just went on a 900-calorie diet."

The numbers, my host explained, were the menus served on those dates. Keeping track of what's been served helps his avoid serving the same menu too often to the same people. Important entries, such as the one about the new diet, are starred. When Mrs. Collins abandons the diet, I am certain my friend will have another entry with the news. Until the, she will undoubtedly be invited only for steak, salad, and Jelis.

Other suggested entries—under the general heading, my friest tells me, of Culinary Idiosyncrasies—are "Didn't touch the quiche Lorraine," "No fish on Fridays," "Has gone on a low-sodium diet," "Absolutely no shrimp," "Adores roast pork if she thinks there's been an apple, so roast one for her," "Heaves help us, has discovered East Indian food; stock up on nuts and raisins and curry powder," "Loves vichyssoise in winter—see Menu No. 23," and in almost every case, "Likes roast best rare or well or doesn't really care, so long as it's lean."

The Menu Memory Book has worked so nicely for my well-prepared host that he has a lot of time on his hands, so he's toying—tongue in cheek, I hope—with the idea of adding still another category, characterized by phrases such as "Left-handed—be sure to seat him at the end of the table" and "Looks divine in blue—try the pale blue damask cloth."

Will you build a 1940 house in 1962?

In the 1940's very few houses were built with central air conditioning-mainly because the cost of cooling was three times as much as it is now.

Today Carrier air conditioning in an average custombuilt, three-bedroom house costs about $800 more than heating alone. This adds only a few dollars a month to your mortgage payments.

Does $800 sound surprisingly low? It is. Carrier central air conditioning is one of the few quality products that have come down in price during recent years.

Central air conditioning never costs less than it does when you build. And the added investment will make your house worth more when you sell. Meanwhile, everyone sleeps better, eats better, feels better-even in the hottest weather. There are fewer allergy reactions. Rooms stay cleaner. Indoor living is happier and entertaining so much easier.

Small wonder that so many homes enjoy Carrier air conditioning today-more than any other make!

Your nearby Carrier dealer can give you the exact cost of air conditioning your home. He's listed in the Yellow Pages of the telephone book. Carrier Air Conditioning Company, Syracuse, New York.

A veritable plethora of prizes!

All this to introduce you to the breathtaking sound (and elegant appearance) inherent to modern component stereo in general, and the new Shure M33 and M77 Stereo Dynetic Phono Cartridges in particular.

No purchase is required; you simply listen to a Shure cartridge demonstration at your hi-fi dealer's showroom and describe your reaction to its singular sound recreation qualities (in 25 words or less). If your statement wins (we don't expect an overabundance of entries, so your chances are rather good), you can begin building your music room. Should the winner have purchased a Shure cartridge as a result of the demonstration (a consummation devoutly to be wished), a magnificent $1,000 RCA Victor stereo record library will also be supplied, as are all other awards, by Shure Brothers, Inc., 222 Hartrey Avenue, Evanston, Illinois.

BYGONE DAYS

Dear Editors:

How marvelous to go back to my lost childhood with the August 1961 issue (Young Homemakers in a Changing World -LH TVG's Cross-Country Tour of Homes)!

Not only did Bobby Ivy (that dignified young pediatrician, Dr. Robert Ivv) and I sashay around to the same Mississippi dances in years past, but Harper Richards (fresh out of college and on one of his first assignments) designed the house I grew up in. And it must have been pretty difficult, too, considering all the things my mother wanted incorporated.

As the piece de resistance for a little girl having her own room and bath for the first time. Harper personally painted a marvelous mural of pirate ships and buccaneers on the bathroom wall. I adored them. but after a month of dreaming every night that a huge, blood-thirsty pirate was going to carry me off and of peering furtively under the bed to make sure he wasn't really there. I gave up privacy for protection and commandeered members of the family to sleep with me.

I should think Harper would like to know that it was a house that brought joy and pleasure to the people who lived in it and to the countless children who wandered in and out. It was a living house.

Josephine Schillig New York, New York

HAPPY ANNIVERSARY

Dear LIVING:

As it happens many times, you plan to write a letter- and never do it. Now I am celebrating an anniversary: I have been in the States five years (I came from Germany) and have been an American citizen one year. Don't you think that this is a good reason to be happy? Well, I am, and since your beloved magazine also came today. I decided to write to you.

When I first got acquainted with you, my husband was still in the Army, and I had to store away idea. since we didn't want to do too much painting, remodeling, building in or tearing out in Army quarters. In 1960 my husband retired, and we took a long vacation-traveled for about six months, camping, meeting new people (I love people), finding odds and ends here and thee. spending as little money as possible. and finally ended up in San Jose.

When we started looking around for a place to live, John wanted as apartment, and I wanted a house (I am a very possessive personnel like to own things). We saw apartments that were too small and houses that were too expensive. until one day it happened. We say a house that we both fell in low with and that fell in love with w. too, It looked unhappy, run-down, really lone some and lost, and seemed to ask us to come and live in it and make it as beautiful as it used to be

The house is old, needs work more work, and love, but we can provide both. And since we are do it-yourselfers, we love LIVING and everything connected with projects we can do ourselves. Hove secondhand stores and old furniture that I can remodel. We will have to go ahead slowly, since we do not have a money tree in our garden, but it is fun to save practically penny for penny. It is also a terrific challeng.

Gilda C. Davis San Jose, Californi

RCA WHIRLPOOL Home Cleaner combines extra suction power and a whirling, sweeping brush to speed your cleaning, lighten your work!

You can save time and trouble with an RCA WHIRLPOOL Home Cleaner because it combines the best features of two types of deaners: the "drawing" power and handling ease of a canister-type cleaner . . . and the motorized brushing action of an upright.

It zips under furniture, noses into tight spots. It even carries along its attachments for cleaning furniture, draperies, walls and ceilings. It tucks away in little space. But most important - you get the benefit of both upright and canister cleaners.

So why put up with a single-action home cleaner? An RCA WHIRLPOOL will do so much more for you!

CHRISTMAS IN AUGUST

Dear Editors:

The Snip & Iron Presents in the August 1961 issue are delightful. This encourages me no talent at all-to make Christmas gifts for the first time since the traditional grade school items.

Mrs. Robert C. Jones Mountain View, California

Gentlemen:

What I like about LIVING is that it covers such a wide range of interests besides just decoration. Above all, I would like to thank you for showing us the why and how of things that make our homes more inviting.

Bondex art seems fascinating (Snip & Iron Presents, August 1961)! The fact that such an article appears in an August issue rates a gold star. for when interesting craft ideas appear around November (when they so often do), in my estimate it is too late for the holiday ping and decorating sea-on. It was time to do things right, and fork hurried is no help.

Pauline A. M. Cleveland, Ga

Dear Sirs:

I certainly like the articles yes have on do-it-your-elf dein They come in handy for Christ and birthday gifts, especially a family is operating on a limit hudget. My husband attends to braska Wesleyan University, ad I find it is refreshing for a week wife to try some of the ideas in your magazine.

Why Aluminum is Your Best Investment for Better, Easier, Cooking

Aluminum utensils help you cook better
Aluminum conducts heat much better than any other metal used for cooking utensils. Thus when you put an aluminum utensil on your gas or electric range, the heat travels quickly across the bottom and up the sides. This fast, even distribution of heat speeds cooking time, prevents hot spots in the utensil, and helps prevent scorched or half-done or over-cooked foods.

Aluminum utensils are light in weight, save you work—If you choose aluminum utensils you will appreciate them every time you use them, because they are so much lighter and easier to handle than utensils made of other metals. They will make your work easier and reduce fatigue. And they're strong and durable, too.

Aluminum utenells safeguard food flavor and purity—Aluminum is known as the metal that is "friendly to food." It can't affect the taste of foods, therefore it protects the true flavor of meats, vegetables, sauces and liquids faluminum coffee-makers are long time favorites). Because of its purity, aluminum is used for cooking and food preparation in leading hospitals, hotels, restaurants and food manufacturing plants. You even find more and more delicate foods such as butter and cheese packaged in pure aluminum foil from Reynolds (true makers of Reynolds Wrap, America's best selling household aluminum foil).

Aluminum utensils are easy to clean and keep clean—Whether you select aluminum utensils in gleaming silvery finishes, lustrous spun or hammered finishes, bright color anodized or other finishes, you'll find your aluminum utensils are easy to care for. They'll serve you faithfully for years with a minimum of attention.

Aluminum utensils are economical—When you consider aluminum's many advantages, you might well expect to pay more for cooking utensils made with this marvelous metal. Actually it's just the opposite. Compare the prices of aluminum utensils with utensils made of other materials. You'll be surprised at how much you can save with aluminum utensils and they'll never break or chip.

NOTE: Reynolds does not make aluminum cookware; however, leading cookware manufacturers use strong, lightweight, rustfree Reynolds Aluminum to help give you the finest quality in your aluminum utensils. Write for names of these manufacturers.

When red-haired Le

ON ENJOYING THE FERMENTED JUICE OF THE GRAPE— WITHOUT QUALMS

by Frank W. Parker

Those Americans who are hesitant in a serting themselves as to the quality of our wines need not be. Nothing said be further from the truth than the assumption that we on this continent has no tradition with the noble because

When red-haired Leif Ericsson established outposts in Iolan and Greenland and then on the North American mainted in Rhode Island and Maine—a half century before Columbuhe was so enthralled by the profusion and quality of the gree along the beach fronts that he dubbed our country Visite the Good, So it was called forever after in the Viking again.

Wine was of considerable importance in this country by the middle of the fifteen hundreds. Captain John Smith were all its possibilities to his home office, and Cortez of Mexico face every land grantee to plant a thousand vines for every fish on his fief. This program was so successful that soon Meio-Spain, fearing for her own industry, forbade the further called the grape in the colony—an unsuccessful prohibities; as reptitious cultivation flourished like the green bay tree.

The steady progress of the Franciscan monks in establishing missions in a wide-flung are as far north as the Sonora and like Valleys brought vineyards and viticulture as incidental by-products of their work. Led by Father Junipero Serra, the men planted vines in the lush soil and climate of middle as northern California, and for the first time, wines of quality were made—wines that were warming and soft, yet tanes to the palate, and with maturity and lasting qualities.

The basic difficulty in learning to appraise wine by mor book is one of semantics. To translate the sensuality of cell, taste, and smell into any semblance of a reliable verbal caris almost impossible. Even though professional winetasters have a lingo of their own, I have heard the most distinguished them vary so drastically in the description of a single gimed wine that it was almost laughable. There is great variance, to, among indivíduals in their senses of taste and smell. Masy i husband has brought home what seemed to him a wondershy pleasant perfume, only to be told by his wife that she has a intention of smelling like a Turkish bazuar! One should develop standards of wine-tasting slowly; a knowledge of the "great" is infinitely helpful in an assessment of "little" wines.

CALIFORNIA WINES

Since there is little variation from one growing season to be next, the wines of California today are mainly nonvintag. Two thirds of the production is in sweet fortified ports, sherris, muscatels, and the like, These wines are often a blend of the of one season with those of another.

The great length and breadth of almost 750 miles of California vineyards can produce almost any European type d grape and does so with enormous yield productivity per as-Regrectably, it is this stupendous fertility that is the downlife of some California wines. Vines that would not be tolerated any self-respecting European closs are maintained simply because volume is the producer's credo.

Nevertheless, there has arisen in California a core of great viticulturists whose method of making wines has gained then fame around the world. Their controlled fermentation and in exchange have vintners from across the seas most interested; the universities of Stanford and Southern California have been most active in furthering their work.

For example, in northern California in the Bay counties around San Francisco there is a group of growers who for generations have assiduously produced and marketed good varietal wines—wines pressed from one variety of grape. Since the moist, lush valleys of these regions outshine their European counterparts, it is not surprising that the Pinot Noir and the Cabernet Sauvignon grapes produce wines that could be conpetitors of the Cote-d'Or and the Médoc. The Pinot Noir makes a wonderful California burgundy and the Cabernet Sauvignos produce a very good facsimile of the famous wines of the Bedeaux region. In this vinters' paradise lies Jack London's famous Valley of the Moon, and from here come some of the greats

The counties of the broad central valley—Fresno, Mercel, Sacramento, San Joachin, Tulare, Kings, Madera, and Kern are hot and in need of irrigation. From here come large quantities of popular sweet dessert wines of good quality.

In the Cucamonga area near Los Angeles a variety of unusual table wines and a large volume of dessert wines are produced. The quality, generally speaking, is very good.

Try the estate-bottled wines, those pressed from one type of grape and bottled at the vineyards. These will be by far the most rewarding. Some of the most famous existing vinters are Almaden, Christian Brothers, Cresta Blanca, Roma, Paul Masson, Swiss Colony, Louis Martini, Beaulieu, Weste Brothers, Beuna Vista, Krug, Sebastiani, Inglenook, Korbel, and Mondavi.

know what you like and why. To examine a wine, first observe its color, Hold it up to the light, peruse it. In some mysterion way, color very definitely affects the taste buds.

Now sniff it. Is the aroma (the professional word is "nose") pleasing? Does it excite your palate in the back of your threat, or is it corky, woody, sour, and acetic?

Now sip it. Are you disappointed? Surprised? Pleased? Such some air in with a little sip of wine. Does this give you a clearer picture? Take a little piece of bread to clean your taste bush and start again. Try to remember what you have scannelly felt. Once you can do this, you are on your way to success.

The relationship between wine and food is quite similar to such familiar taste-marriages as ham and eggs, pork and beam, ice cream and blueberry pie. I give you these combinations of wine and food for what they're worth. There's no mystery about them, no compulsion to follow them. Just try them.

As a parting thought, I should like to quote Ben Franklin. He claimed, that, before Noah, there was no wine, and man drank only water. "Men became abominably wicked and were justly exterminated by the water they loved to drink. God, to quench Noah's thirst, created the vine and revealed to him the art of making wine of it!"

FOOD&ENTERTAINMENT

1. At-home entertaining can be more inviting and satistying with the advice from Canada Dry on How to Be a Cordial Host. This colorful booklet presents many uses for 20 delicious cordials, including crème de menthe, apricot, blackberry, or cherry-flavored brandy, crème de cacao, anisette, and curacao. There are recipes for canapés, cooking, desserts, cocktails, and afterdinner drinks. Free

2. Delightful and simple solutions to the problem of adding tempting variety to your menu planning are provided in Buried Treasure from Doxsee, packers and processors of New England and Manhattan clam chowder. clam juice, minced clams, and whole littleneck clams. Easyto-make recipes are offered for appetizers, soups, and many exciting entrees. Also included are 12 aluminum foil containers (which simulate clam shells and are reusable) for preparing and serving delicious baked clams and clams casino, 25c

3. Special occasions that call for quantity cooking continually confront homemakers. Catering to a Crowd from Standard Brands is the perfect answer to preparing food for a large group. A practical feature of this 32page booklet, which contains 50 recipes for 20 different kinds of parties and fund-raising affairs, is that the recipes are given for servings of six or 25. Particularly helpful is the information on how to plan menus, figure costs, buy food in quantity, organize committees, and delegate work so that you can enjoy your parties as much as your guests do. 25c

4. Unplanned get-togethers are often more fun than planned parties if you know the secrets of ever-ready hospitality. Your next gathering will be a surefire success if you follow the tips in Instant Hospitality from Wolfschmidt Vodka. It includes suggestions on supplies to keep on hand, conversation starters, ideas for easy-to-make drinks, plus menus and recipes for such occasions as a patio supper, five-to-midnight cocktails, after-the-football-game supper, beach party, and an intimate, relaxed supper. Free

5. Bourbon derives its name from Bourbon County, Kentucky, where it was first made. This is just one of the interesting facts included in The Spirit of Kentucky, offered by Glemore Distilleries. This full-color booklet not only describes the history and making of bourbon but explains a great deal of the terminology connected with the processing of whiskey mashing, yeasting, fermenting, distilling, etc. You will find drink recipes and, in a specially prepared glossary, learn exactly what proof, bottled-in-bond, straight, rye, blend, and sour mash mean. Free

6. Add new fun to an outdoor gathering with the Barbecue Party Book by Paul Jones. This attractively illustrated pamphlet presents ranch-style suggestions in the pioneering spirit, and the round-up of dishes, drinks, songs, and games is in keeping with this theme. For example, you will learn how to rustle up appropriate dips, chuck wagon steaks, frijoles, dogs 'n 'burgers, Sioux spareribs, tamales and tortillas, spicy barbecue sauces, and thirst quenchers that will add zest to your patio entertaining, 25c

7. The barbecue is an expression of casual living and entertaining that has spread from coast to coast and has special appetizing appeal. It is mainly a family of flavors, as you will discover in the 32-page booklet Come to Our Barbeene from the Taylor Wine Company, This invitation to fine eating and fun contains not only a menu suggestion but outstanding recipes for preparing various foods. savory sauces, and wine marinades (many of which qualify for indoor use). An unusual addition are the pages devoted to hibachi cookery. Free book contains 753 recipes, alphabetically listed, for every imaginable kind of drink far every taste or occasion, and it tells the proper way to serve each one. The 1961 edition also contains special sections on the martini, eggnog, party planning (how much for how many), a liquor dictionary, and many har measurements and hints that are bound to make your a manter among mixers. $1

9. Playing cards are the ticket to exotic, far-off lands via a fast new route. You can provide at your next party some of the excitement of going places with Around the World in 20 Card Games from the Association of American Playing Card Manufacturers. Besides giving the rules of games related to different countries and sections of the United States, this unique, humorously illustrated booklet offers suggestions about invitations, decorations, and refreshments to belo you create the atmosphere and fun of traveling afar. 10e

10. Investigation discloses that, because so little is known by the average person about transistors and transistor mdies, many people have purchased equipment that has been unsatisfacotry and inadequate. Facts You Should Know about Transistor Radios from the Transistor World Corp. answers such questions as: What should we expect of a transistor radio? Do transistors last forever? Why is one transistor mdio better than another? Why should a buyer be concerned not only with how many transistors the radio has but what kind of transistors it uses? Free

PICTURE MAP

Now . , at last . , the first complete picture map of the Civil War—as breathtaking and as magnificent as any map ever designed. All the pageantry and galiantry of that opic strough is spreas across the SEVEN SQUARE FEET of this giant wall map.

SHOWS NEARLY 100 CAMPAIGNS

PRINTED IN BRILLIANT 4-COLOR

The facts are presented against a background of brilliant four-color. A glance tells where the "Rluce" and the 'Gray-' fought, and the other colors brighten the map, make it easy to read, these for framing.

INCLUDES & SIDE PAINTINGS

Some of the major events of this struggle are high-lighted in individual oil paintings that provide a vivid border for the man. They include:

1. A full-length portrait of Stonewall Jackson during his Valley Compaign of May June,

2. Grant's slege of Vicksburg, May 18-July 4,

The war at sea—The Alabama under Con-federate Admiral Semmes sunk by Kearsage off Frame, June 19, 1864.

4. Portrait of Sheridan on his favorite moust during the Sheriandsah Valley campaign

5. Opening lumbardment of Fort Somier, April 12-13, 1861.

And in addition to each of these paintings (all in bright, full colur), there are full length paintings of Union and Rebel subliers, showing their uniforms and currect equipment in the detail.

Used by Schools, Colleges and Libraries

Thousands bare been sold all over the United States, many just to individuals interested in the Civil War, many to collectors, but also thousands to exhauls, colleges and libraries for use in teaching, for refer-ence work and for prizes | usell worth framings|

Created by Grosset & Dunian One of America's Leading Publishers

Grosset & Dunlap, one of the finest publishing firms in the world, reannisement and supervised the re-search on this map—research done by three leading scholars, and this beautiful map has been on sale in the country's bookstores for $2.95.

You'll find this flavor line in every bottle of Wish-Bone Italian Dressing. It's where the good spices and herbs get together in just the right amount between the pure golden oil and the vintage vinegar. Tiny garlic buds, oregano, peperone rosso-all the important ingredients that separate real Italian dressing from the others.

Wish-Bone Italian Dressing is made from an authentic Italian recipe brought over to this country many years ago. It's the real Italian dressing that puts lots of sass in your salad. Pick up a bottle next time out.

Grow your own Golden Cloud. A recently introduction shade tree with a rounded tip and a graceful curved shape in Golden Cloud ash (Fraxinus excelsior aurea). A fast-grown is thrives under city conditions and in small yards. It is clean as seedless and consequently excellent on lawns. When the lef foliage unfolds in the spring, it is a delicate chartreuse and remains clear yellow all summer. The bright golden but a new twigs is colorful during the whole winter and, when picity greatly enhances bouquets and indoor decorations of greaters.

Solve Christmas for the garden minded, including yearl. Amaryllis bulbs planted six to eight weeks before Christmas bloom for the holidays with flowers too large to be real—they are real! The jumbo bulbs come 10 inches in circumferest and each produces four to eight vivid dramatic flowers. Yet may buy assorted colors—scarlet, white-veined coral, pink, or pure white with gold-tipped stamens. Pot in good rich earl with one third of the bulb above the soil surface and in a pat of a size that leaves an inch all around between bulb and im. Set in the window garden in partial sun, then bide your time.

Flower your cacti by this seemingly rough and brust method. Repot them in sandy, gritty soil, cramping their root in a container much too small. Place them in a sunny window and water them only once every two weeks. The plants, feeling they are near the end, will, in desperation, send up flowers in a instinctive urge to continue the species! Actually, since you are helping the plants to fulfill themselves, you aren't being too cred.

Something new and different for flower arranges is a plastic green foam cone that holds water and can be molded to fit any container. Flower stems poked into it stay put, and the cone may be used again and again. Unusually shaped object of all sizes that you never thought of as useful for flower arranging become vase possibilities. In fact, anything in the loses that holds water becomes a possibility—everything from a large, curving sea shell to an ash tray to Aunt Melinda's old foot bath.

BACK AND FORTH—up and down—hurry, scurry! It's estimated that you take from 18,000 to 25,000 steps a day, depending on the size of your house and family. Many of these could be saved by extensions.

Just think of all the steps an extension phone will save you!

IN THE KITCHEN a phone lets you take and make calls while you keep one eye on the baby and the other on the back burner.

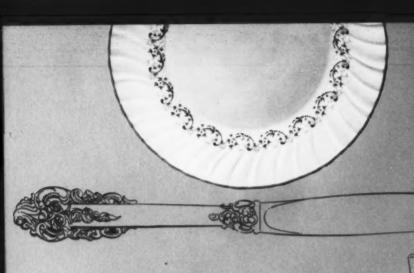

IN THE BEDROOM an extension phone ends dashing down half and stairs, gives you privacy by day and precious security at night

Step-saving extension phones wherever you need them cost very little. And they come in your choice of attractive colors and styles: the familiar wall and table models, or the new Princess—small in size with a dial that lights up. To order just call your Bell Telephone Business Office or ask your telephone man.

WON'T YOU PLEASE

It is estimated that, during his or her life span, the average human being with a convivial bent attends something like two thousand parties—quite a record. Consequently, along about the beginning of the second thousandth-Post Office and Musical Chairs no longer holding quite the lure they once did the imaginative hostess puts on her thinking cap. She knows that the secret of a successful party is two-fold; first of all the people themselves must be fun, and secondly, they must be given something to have fun with. Like all of us, she has her quota of dear, unlively friends who are much happier playing bridge than charades, and quite wisely, she doesn't mix them with non-card players. But on gay nights, she prepares herself with an idea to prove that there is something new under the sun. If you doubt that possibility, come along with us. We've been wearing our thinking cap at quite an angle, and on the following pages have set the stage (and a series of tables) for a display of umpteen truly amusing and attractive ways to entertain con brio.

LUIS LEMUS

Remember when you used to swap your extra "treasures" for a new dress for your doll? When your kid brother traded an iddrasty key for a live and kicking frog? When you "played store" and used sticks and stones to bay what caught your eye? Those were the days!

Here's a party for grown-ups that captures all that horse-trading magic of your childhood. And this is how easily you can stage it.

Let's say you're inviting four people for dinner. Before the party, prepare three boxes of food for each guest—main course, salad, and desert. The boxes should be identical in size and shape but not in content. For example, you might put chicken legs in one box, sliced ham a nother, cold roast beef in a third. With slads and dessert, go in for variety, too—this is an important element of the party. Then, wrap all the boxes for all the guests in two different kinds of paper, mix them up so even you can't tell what's in which, and line them up at the wall or on a buffet. The big point is to make sure the boxes look so much alike that they don't give a clue to what's inside.

Start the party off with a good hot soup and seat the guests at the table. At each place put a clip with $75 in stage money. Soup course over, invite everyone to pick three boxes any three boxes-for the rest of his dinner. One guest may find he has three desserts and no meat. Another, two salads, a meat course, and no dessert. That's when the fun begins. It's up to each guest to get the dinner he wants most, if he can horsetrade the others into switching-even Stephen or with money thrown in to add to the deal. "I'll give you $10 for your chicken leg." "Swap you this cake for your ham." "Trade this brownie, plus $20, for that apple pie." Money changes hands like crazy. So does the food. The best traders win the best dinners.

To keep stakes high and the trading lively, have two grand prizes as table centerpieces-one marked $100, the other $150. At the end of dinner, guests buy these pig-in-a-poke prizes with the money they've been able to corral. Or you can auction the prizes off to the highest bidder. But don't tell what they are. It's the grab-bag element of chance that makes this party so hilarious from start to finish. Try it and see.

The bright and colorful family room shown below and on the previous two pages was made to order for off-beat parties like this. The gold, pumpkin, and green color scheme adds to the gaiety. Neither grown-ups' shindigs nor children's freefor-alls can hurt the laminated table top or vinyl floor covering. And the buffet cart and gold-colored aluminum trays are firstaids for the hostess, who can relax at her own party and have fun.

AN OLD SWEDISH CUSTOM

rom the land of long winter nights, snow and reindeer, and great forests of evergreens comes a charming before-Christmas custom that might well become a tradition in the New World. On the first Sunday of Advent-four weeks before Christmas-old and young gather at farmsteads to light the Advent candle. One candle only is lighted that first Sunday. On subsequent Sundays a second, third, and fourth candle is lit, until Christmas rolls round. Candle ritual over, all hands turn to making bright ornaments for the tree. There's feasting, of course-smorgasbord, beer or hot spiced wine, coffee, and cake. What a delightful custom to start here at home! Invite friends and kinfolk to your candle-lighting party, then turn them loose making decorations. Pile a table high with the makings-fancy papers, bits of glitter and tinsel, seals, cardboard, ribbons, pins, staples, and glue. Use dime-store whatnots-practical or giddy-and plates of cookies and candies to be wrapped in their holiday dress. Sample models made ahead of time will give inspiration to your guests. Refreshments can be as simple or as elaborate as ed to red, blue to blue, setings to match say, "This means you!" Here's a wonderful way to get your party off on a high note right from the start. And it's all so simple. When you send or phone your invitations, ask each guest to wear something of a specific color - but don't tell why; surprise is half the trick. Cue your table settings to the colors you've assigned. A man might wear a yellow tie, for example, or a girl might wear a red or blue bow in her hair. (Lipstick and eye shadow do not count.) Each guest finds his place at the table by the color he is wearing. It's so much more fun than pulling straws or hunting for place cards or waiting to be told where to sit. And it adds a delightful element of chance because how can anyone tell who his color-mate will be? Plan your color keys around whatever table fittings you ownplace mats, china, and so on. Or cut mats out of felt or paper. Or just tuck a colored favor at each place. The point is to cue your table to several colors and have your guests wear a color to match.

In this family room the bright colored chairs that are part of the day-to-day setting help the color scheme along. But the big thing is to let yourself go with color. It will make for a party that's fun

PARTY FOR THE HOSTESS

'ho says you can't give a dinner party where the hostess stays put at the table? The trick is to keep it simple and pull a chafing dish and tea cart into the act. Just to prow what we say, here's a setting for a party designed so the hosten. too, is a guest. A chafing dish of hot food, the salad, and coffee are within easy reach on the tea cart. which also doubles as a catchall for used dishes. Gleaming silver. shiny crystal, and tall tapering candles help the hostess put her best foot forward. The color scheme of the room beige, white, and soft green is a perfect foil for the food, gives it the star billing it deserves. Even the centerpiece of pale grapes and cherry tomatoes-to be eaten or not as you wish carries out the air of relaxed enjoyment, and the red of the wine adds an accent of color. The whole effect is pretty as a picture. Best of all, any jumping up by the hostess is strictly ruled out. Next time you plan a party, bring your chafing dish and tea cart out of hiding, plan a simple menu, set the table with all the niceties you can muster. Then sit down and enjoy yourself. You'll have lots more fun-and so will all your guests.

EASY CHAIR DINING SMART, CASUAL, AND FUN...

On trays

Loads of young families are doing it these days—using their dining room as an extra sitting room as well as a place to eat. But this dual personality does mean special planning—substituting easy chairs for conventional dining room seating pieces. This brilliant red, white, and black room is a case in point. It can set the scene for a quiet chat, an informal tray-party, or sit-down dining with equal aplomb. When tray-dining is in order, the buffet on the side is used for cocktails and hors d'oeuvres, the long table before the window is set up with the food (below and opposite page, top left). Individual tray tables, brought out from shallow cabinet, are placed by each chair to hold guests' food and drink conveniently

At table

Here the self-same room and the self-same furniture turn into a setting for a formal dinner at the table (opposite page, bottom and top right). The long table is turned endwise to the window, and the lamp table of the same height, which is usually beside a chair, is added as an extension. The buffet in this case is used as a server to hold champagne cooler and coffee service. The easy chairs are moved up. Even such accessories as the black tole lamps play their part on the buffet and the table. The chairs are very new and exciting—made of pure foam poured over steel frames and then molded into shape

I wonder sometimes if hermits don't have the right idea. Especially on those cozy little occasions when you've asked a few dear old friends for a cocktail, only to discover that unknown to you-two aren't speaking, two are on the verge of divorce, two have on the same dress (this you know soon enough), and two have been to another cocktail party and should have gone straight home. Soon supine, this merry duo is now yours for the evening. So, since intimate groups seem a hazard, you settle for an all-out shindig and ask everyone you know and owea mixed bag. This is a sizable undertaking, quite apt to take 10 years off your life, and don't expect your husband to be of any help. He detests this kind of thingsays they make his feet hurt because he has to stand up and his jaws ache because he has to keep smiling when he's about as amused as the Great Stone Face. He'll be in good company, however—there'll be plenty of forced grins around, and a big party does pay off debts. It does not, may I add, pay the cleaning bills. Why do women wearing black suede shoes head like bears to honey for anything white and sit on it with their feet curled under them? Why do certain men accept canapes they don't want, hold them for a while, then carefully tuck them under the cushion of a satin chair? (This I've caught them at.) Why, with ash trays staring them in the face, do people put cigarettes out in potpourri bowls, inkwells, and the shrimp dip? And why is there always a kind of babbling camp follower - male or female - who tags after you like a gnat, even to the kitchen and, if it's a she, right into the sanctity of the bathroom? But it's not for the hostess to reason why. Not, that is, until a few weeks later when you stage another pay-off: Joe's boss and his wife for dinner. This involves supplementing the evening with some enchanting people you don't know very well but need for sheer dash. It also means cleaning house, polishing silver, washing china, pressing linen, and cooking up a storm. In any event, the evening goes swimmingly, and not until the last gay good night has wakened the neighbors do you discover that there's a charred hole in the only expensive rug you ever expect to own and another in your Grandmother's Irish linen tablecloth, that the ladies have left most of their lipstick on your best napkins, that someone has given the canary a cigar, and that the powder room plumbing is out of [continued on page 186] has its pitfalls when you live in a small town, go to a cocktail party, and are expected to greet your two next-door neighbors (the one you speak to and the one you don't) as if you hadn't seen them for years. Or when you live in a city and your hostess lets you fend for yourself in a room full of strangers and the conversation runs a brilliant gamut from "On the rocks, please," to "Yes, I'm Isabelle's first cousin." Or when, no matter where you live, no matter what kind of party, everyone talks about his summer in Europe except you. You haven't been away from home since you graduated from college. Then there are those "little" luncheons when you're so crowded at the table that your arms feel zippered to your ribs; there aren't any ash trays where do you put your ashes - in your shoe?), and the two girls on either side of you treat you like a deaf mute and carry on sparklingly about the weather, baby sitting, and Perry Como. Dinner parties are a joy, too, especially when you arrive, as summoned, at seven, to find your host in the shower and the hostess barely out of it and a feeling of damp shock in the air. So never be punctual. It only means putting your brand new cashmere coat on a bed as an underlay for what will eventually look like a dead animal the pleasure act. Once again, the table will be pleasantly packed: you inevitably draw a table leg-a splintery one -and there go your nylons. You could, of course, wear culottes. Anyhow, none of these trifles compare to a real humdinger of a weekend. Getting there, of course, is half the fun—the rain, the traffic, the cute little map that may lead to Blackbeard's treasure but, believe me, to nowhere else. But you get there somehow, and once you've given up trying to balance your bag on a luggage rack made for Tiny Tim, you descend, rayaged by hunger, to discover that dinner isn't for another hour and a half. Thereafter, the delights are varied, Since you've forgotten to bring anything to read, you turn to the bedside table, which is stacked to the gills with National Geographics-collector's items all: the latest was printed in 1936. You also forgot your toothbrush and don't think it will do you any good to look in the medicine cabinet; there's nothing in there but the dog's comb. At midnight, your suddenly thirsty husband will paddle about in the dark, blacken his eye on a moose head hung in the hall, and stub his toe on the bathroom scale. With any luck, [continued on page 186]

I love being a Guest but...

e all know people who flatly refuse to attempt a single night of sleep—much less a weekend—at the homes of even their dearest friends. Why? Because no visitors are so vulnerably human as overnight guests. Accustomed to the familiar comforts of home, why should they put up with the possible horrors of a lumpy bed, strange noises in the night, and an inhospitable bathroom? They won't; and once bitten, twice shy, they'll probably rise to the lure only with out-and-out warm-hearted pampering.

In the first place, the guest bed and its surroundings should be a perfect symbol of hospitality—a pretty island of sheer comfort. Guests, even if they stay up half the night reminiscing, need their sleep, and they won't get it on what is quite often a reasonable facsimile of a torture rack. So look to your guest mattress and box spring. Are they up to snuff? Are the sheets smooth as silk, the blankets downy? Are their colors related to the room itself? Since the hope chest, these days, is a bit passé, there is no need to use pink trousseau sheets in a room where pink should never be at all.

Moreover, not only are guests sensitive to color, they also require considerable practical accoutering. Snug in our own beds, we forget that they may be thirsty. Is there a carafe of water by the bed? Their heads may ache; is the aspirin handy? They may have colds; where's the Kleenex? They may read all night; is the lighting conducive? They may have lost a button; is there a needle and thread? Scissors? A button? The temperature may fall; do they know where the extra blankets are? Is there a night light to get them to the bathroom without breaking their necks? And, if there is only one bath, plus children in the house, you must double your efforts to make them bath-happy. One of the most successful solutions is a bath cart; this can be practically anything on wheels (ours is an old teacartsee page 181). To be kept in the guest room and wheeled to the bath, it holds a small arsenal of towels, toiletries, and tissues. Since guests always forget something, try to anticipate their lacks with toothbrushes, cold cream, razor blades and anything else you have forgotten when you were a guest. This little traveling drug store can be the guest's best friend and is easily assembled. No matter if the children dress up in the family towels, use up all the cologne, and pour the bath oil down the drain: The guests are self-sufficient, perfectly equipped, and consequently, child- and hostloving. Above all, they are flattered to the nines by your care and thoughtfulness, and a thoroughly flattered guest always comes back for more.

So, to be a perfect hostess, you must know exactly what it feels like to be a visitor in your own home. Spend a night in your guest room and be peckishly critical. Bribe the children to bring you breakfast in bed, and if you awaken to it refreshed and happy with nary a bone to pick with anyone, you have done the trick. Yours is a visitable and hospitable home.

on a quiet street in the heart of New Orleans. The structure they bought would not, at first glance, send anyone into transports of joy. Old and shabby, a double "shotgun," it offered little except location and an idea for a sound investment. Today, it is a charming urban residence with two apartments—one for the de la Barres, one for their tenants—and flexible provision for a phase of life denied Mary and Frank for nine years—entertaining. Remodeling is hardly a lark, but here it made possible the union of upstairs income and downstairs hospitality.

Breakfast bar at end of kitchen is also a party bar and part of a storage center including a little wine "cellar." Officer's chairs and a low table form a pleasant window group for informal luncheons!

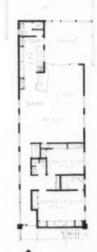

An invaluable addition to the window's officer's chair grouping is a long cabinet designed to house stereo equipment—turntable, tuner, amplifier, two speakers, and recordings. Since the de la Barres can seat 30 people, concerts are an entertainment staple, and with the furniture pushed back, the ternazzo makes a fine floor for dancing hether your family is enjoying a quiet weekler evening at home or you're having a group of friends for a party on Saturday night, remember that listening to music can be a most pleasant form of entertainment. A must, therefore, is a music wall where hiefidelity equipment, television, piano, and other musical isstruments can be grouped. And to dispel the doubts of the homemaker who fears that such equipment will play held with her decoration plan, let us hasten to reassure her; you can decorate with music. In other words, high-fidelity components amplifiers, preamps, tuners, speakers, record players, tape recorders, and the rest- are so compactly and attractively designed that they can be openly revealed or else incorporated in almost any kind of storage, whether built-in or in cabinets especially designed to hold hi-fi or adapted with minimum fuss and cost. KITCHENS with a yen for parties

You've heard for years "the best parties are those that begin and end in the kitchen." We say, the best parties are those that use the kitchen as a stage set for the whole party. And the best kitchens are those that, like Cinderella, doff their party fixings at midnight and revert to breakfast cornflakes and coffee with little fuss and muss. Such kitchens are not hard to come by, whether you have a mere 6-by-10-foot hideaway like the apartment kitchen on page 168 or plenty of room as in the family kitchen shown here. The secret is in an arrangement that keeps a firm eye on the convenience of the hostess before, after, and while the party is going full-force. A little imagination in decorating helps. Ingenuity helps too-using one counter for plates and flatware, another for salad making, and the cooking island as a serving table where guests may help themselves to food kept piping hot on thermostatically controlled burners. You'll find many ideas on how to adapt this light-hearted new party-giving to your own kitchen in the four kitchens shown. So, set your stage for a party-and have fun!

"...come for chowder at 7"

Made to order for a Saturday night party—chowder or steworgood old baked beans—is this remodeled family kitchen with a warm and mellow mood, thanks to wood, copper, and calico-print paper on the walls. Center island can double as buffet and hot table. Salad, hreads, and beverage are on counters near the sink. Depending on their number, guests can eat at table or on trays in family room

"...we're having a buffet on Sunday"

It's a far cry from the days when a dinner party meant serving a six-course meal with all the formality one could muster. Today's relaxed serve-yourself variety is so much easier on everyone concerned—and lots more fun. We can thank the buffet for starting this trend to informal entertaining. Everything is set up in advance, and the guests take over the serving duties, once the responsibility of the gone-forever "helpers in the kitchen." The newest idea of staging the party right in the kitchen makes it that much simpler. Instead of putting everything on one "groaning board" out front—with frequent trips to the kitchen for replenishment—all the counters and even the cooking center get into the act right at the source of supply. The hostess never has to do a disappearing act to make sure all goes well.

"...drop in for cocktails after the game"

Tucked away on the top floor of a city apartment house is this jewel of a kitchen, ready at the drop of a hat to serve two or 20. In a 6-by-10-foot space everything needed to prepare a full-course banquet or snacks for a party has been fitted into place. Yet there's no hint of being cramped and hemmed in. Much of this orderly feeling of spaciousness is due to the tremendous amount of storage space. Cabinets line the walls from floor to ceiling. Things not in use at the moment are kept out from under foot and out of sight but are handy when needed. Fluorescent lighting over the counters throws ample light on the subject-especially when the subject is food. Best of all is the arrangement of the kitchen, which allows an efficient flow of work. Here's a small kitchen that meets the housekeeper more than halfway, whether getting daily meals or party treats.

Double-decker arrangement of wall cabinets reveals a luxurious array of glassware and china. Everyday items are kept on lower shelves, within arm's reach. Less frequently used items—such as champagne glasses, over-sized platters, and serving bowls—can be stored above, accessible with compact, fold-away ladder stool

Every appliance usually found in a big family kitchen is included in this miniature version. A full—iszed built-in oven is flanked by a six-unit cook top to take care of cooking for a crowd. A two-door, built-in refrigerator-freezer insures a good supply of ice cubes, plus plenty of food storage. Clean-up chores are ably handled by the under-counter dishwasher. The whole informal air of this kitchen is one of hospitality. Off to one side an extra dining area large enough for a family table sets the stage for festive feasting and entertaining. When not used for meals, this is the favorite gathering spot of the family for study, games, and crossword puzzles. It's close enough so that the homemaker getting meals feels in touch. The warm cheery colors of autumn leaves on the walls are echoed at the windows. Everything in this kitchen is well organized to make things easy for the hostess. Particularly convenient is the separate peninsula unit where dessert and coffee service can be arranged ahead of time, ready to put on the table when the main course is over. Between meals it doubles as a handy snack bar and planning desk.

STEW or RAGOUT

perfect party fare

it can be as simple or as elegant as you like; nothing is so good, so easy, and so inexpensive

by LILLIAN LANGSETH-CHRISTENSEN

t was probably a hungry man who invented the first heatproof stew pot, and it was probably his wife, hungry for leisure, who invented the first combination of ingredients to put into it. After that, she could vary the mixture as she chose, bank her fire, and leave dinner to simmer happily away while she swept or even slept. All that was required of her was an occasional stirring, and today, several centuries later, that is just about all that is required of us when we cook a stew.

Of all the Food Family Trees today, the one on your right is the shortest and the most useful for entertaining—particularly when the guests are male. Unlike the usual family tree, with its countless little scions, this one is more of an ancient family bush, on which grow the few great and classic stews. If the word "stew" incidentally, seems unsuitable for a dinner party, the word "ragoût" may be substituted. In this way ragoût d'agneau Irlandais will taste as sweet as any Irish stew, and ragoût de boeuf à l'Hongroise is only another way to say gulyas (a word more familiar to us as goulash) in six elegant words.

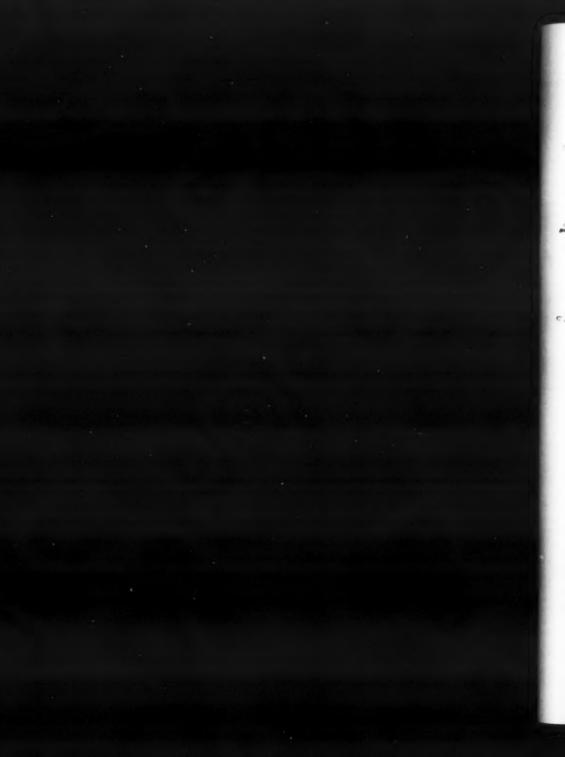

In each country, there is an indigenous stew that marks the boundaries more firmly than any geographical line. In France, the stew has to be cooked with red wine; in Hungary, it would be unthought of without paprika; and in Russia, a great deal of sour cream is imperative. The Germans never eat their stews without noodles or spaetzle, the frish insist on potatoes, and the Indians on rice. Everywhere, however, the basic elements of a stew are largely those required for man's daily nourishment. In other words, cat a good stew every day and you'll keep the doctor and malnutrition away. Any self-respecting stew should be at least one-quarter meat, one-quarter vegetables, one-quarter starch (this is usually served separately), and one-quarter imagination. The last, of course, is the most important quarter and often includes alcohol. Teetotalers need have no qualms; the alcohol vanishes, flavor remains.

In addition to the classic stews, there are millions of ille gitimate descendants, created on the spur of the moment and inspired by all the little jars of leftovers in the refrigerator. Just as the artist is inspired by a palette of brilliant pigments. so the cook is carried away with the heady joys of composition as she empties each little container into the stew pot. Once she knows how to make the basic stew, she can add and subtract to her heart's content. If the refrigerator contains pers. carrots, and mushrooms, fine: tomatoes, corn, and olives? Very good, indeed. If she comes across half a bottle of good red winand a few thimbles of brandy in the bottom of the bottle, her fancies can turn to thoughts of ragout à la maison. Or should the refrigerator deliver up odds and ends like a truffle (it never does) or a few cocktail sausages and a bunch of chives the stew has a good chance of becoming memorable. As incredients are added and the stew becomes more and more distinguished, it becomes, inversely, less and less reproducible. As opposed to the classic stew, the inspired stew rings a note of sadness; it will never be eaten again, simply because, at this point, even the inventor cannot remember just what and how much of it went into the stew pot on that gala day.

We have preached the wisdom of learning the simple base recipes on the principle that the adept basic-recipe cook cat then cook anything that has descended from the originalin this case, stew. It is a dish meant primarily for enting. Some dishes are for show, some are to show prowess (the cook'n), and others are for novelty; but stew—honest, direct, and uscomplicated—is for eating and eating with gusto. The first best thing about a stew is the way it tastes; the second best is the fact that it can be prepared the day before and reheated before serving. It can also simmer all afternoon and be served at the moment of perfection. Nor need the cook have any fears about timing; with low heat temperature controls, the moment of perfection can be stretched into an hour or more.

USE OF BRANDY IN A STEW

A good stew does not necessarily require the addition of brandy, but if you are going to use it, be sure that it is added at one of these three different stages. (We prefer the second method.)

- · Marinate the meat in a few tablespoons of brandy for at least two hours. Turn the meat frequently. Add any remaining brandy to the liquid in which the meat is stewed.
- · Add warm brandy after the meat is browned. Flame it and add the cooking liquid only after the flame dies.
- · Add brandy at the end of cooking time. Some cooks even suggest flaming at serving time.

Dunkers

The sauce of a good stew is inimitable. If you like, you may eat it with a spoon; the classic approach, however, is with crusty, soft-centered bread "dunkers" of various types. Here are a few.

French bread, the crustiest of all the loaves

Vienna twist, a braided loaf with sesame seeds

Italian bread, a long loaf with a very soft center

Italian bread in the round, flour-powdered top

Clover-leaf roll, delicate and buttery Seeded crescent roll topped with caraway seeds and coarse salt

Notes from an Inquisitive Cook

Like most women, I blow my stack when we have a good hearty dinner and my dear husband picks at it like a diva on a diet. The reason, of course, is that he's had a good hearty lunch—business or otherwise—and just isn't up to another lull-sized meal. So, to save my temper, we've made a pact; he gives me the word after such occasions, and I happily plan a lighter dinner than usual. It's also a wonderful opportunity to have what I call "planned-overs." So-called leftovers, even when they're good, leave my family quite cool, and I know it's the label, not the flavor. Anyway, we're sure to have more company than usual from now through the holidays, so November is a good month to stretch the food budget just as far as a little imagination and spice will go.

If gir for

If you're down to the tag end of the Thanksgiving turkey, wrap the slices of turkey in foil with a few spoonfuls of gravy, heat and serve with a hefty, luscious salad of cold, cooked Brussels sprouts, a half cup or more of sliced ripe olives (depending on your liking for ripe olives), and chopped pimientos for color. Toss thoroughly with French dressing and let it marinate for an hour or so. Then ask yourself what in the world you would have done with the Last of the Mohicans bird had there been any more of it.

One of our favorite planned-overs is a rice-and-meat salad. I simply cook more rice than we eat at one meal and keep the surplus chilled in the refrigerator. Then, when we get to the last morsels of the baked ham, leg of lamb, or roast beef, I mix the rice with some finely diced meat and chopped chives and parsley and toss with a dressing of two tablespoons of salad oil, one egg yolk, and three tablespoons of wine vinegar seasoned with salt and freshly ground black pepper. With a cup of hot soup to start with and whatever is available for dessert (hot applesance, maybe, and cook the apples in cider), we lap it up and lick our chops. For a five-minute planned-over, you can't beat it—not in a month of Sundays.

When you make a meat loaf, save enough of the mixture to run up a few meat balls to keep in the freezer. Then when the meat loaf is just a pleasant memory, brown the meat balls and add them to what I call skillet macaroni. It's a good idea to cook extra macaroni for soups and such so that it's always at hand. Put four cups of cooked macaroni in a skillet with enough butter or margarine to keep it from sticking and add a can of condensed cream of celery soup. Toss in some celery seeds and a pinch of oregano, cook over low heat until the macaroni is hot, then add the meat balls, cook a few minutes more, and serve it with a crisp salad. If you're of the spicy school, try a can of chili or Italian marinara sauce instead of the cream of celery soup.

For a pleasant, easy dessert, toast a few slices of pound or raisin cake lightly and spread with jelly or strawberry jam—or any other kind. Add a slice of vanilla ice cream, then another slice of cake, and top with a squirt of ready-mix whipped cream. For all its simplicity, this has an elegant look, tastes as if it took all day to make, and is a wonderful way to polish off a slightly tired cake,

Speaking of fatigue, if you've ever exhausted yourself chasing a tiny bit of egg shell around a bowl and wound up with the shell the victor, try using another piece of shell to remove this irritating bit; it works like magic. As for those extra egg whites or yolks you always save and seldom use because by the time you're ready for them they've turned to glue, cover the container with wet blotting paper when you put it into the refrigerator. They'll stay as fresh as Michaelmas daisies.

The children love frankfurters in any form, and one of their favorites is hot dog salad. Simply add a can of cocktail frankfurters to your favorite hot potato salad recipe and heat until the "dogs" are really hot. Lacking frankfurters, I sometimes substitute a can of corned beef, cubed; heat and stir thoroughly until the beef is evenly mixed through the salad.

One of my favorite company dishes is vermouth and lime broiled chicken. Try it sometime when you feel the need of oohing and aahing. Sprinkle garlic salt on halves or parts of chicken and place them skin-side down on the broiler rack. Brush generously with fresh lime juice, sprinkle with freshly ground black pepper, and douse with dry vermouth. Broil until lightly browned, turn, repeat the treatment, and broil, basting from time to time, until crisply brown. It's as near to perfection as most chickens ever get,

Now it's time to get out the Christmas lists; it's later than you think, but isn't it always? Of course, if you've shopped early—as I haven't—you needn't worry about time. Well, cheer up, there are still x number of days before Xmas. Ah, peaceful old November. You don't know how I'll miss you.

BATH CART

An ancient tea wagon came down from the attic to become this useful and attractive bath cart. A coat of paint, a new top covered in a decorative paper and with holes cut out for bottles, and two brass towel racks - one at either end -did the trick. The cart moves easily down the hall, carries anything and everything the most finicky of bathers might call for

ALMOND CHEESE WAFERS HARICOT DE VEAU (French Veal Stew) NOODLES MOCHA BAVARIAN CREAM COFFEE

ALMOND CHEESE WAFERS 8 ounces sharp Cheddar cheese, grated 1 cup butter 2 cups flour 1 egg

1/2 cup slivered almonds

 Combine cheese with butter and flour and work into a smooth dough.

 Chill if desired, but it is not necessary. The dough can be prepared in advance and stored in the refrigerator for as long as a week.

 Roll the dough out thin on a lightly floured board, cut with large cookie cutter, and place on an unbuttered baking sheet.

 Brush each wafer with beaten egg and sprinkle with a few slivered almonds, dust with coarse salt, and bake in a 375° F. oven for 10 to 15 minutes or until wafers are golden.

Note: If baked in advance, the wafers should be stored in a tin. Before serving, they can be heated for a few minutes in a slow oven.

MOCHA BAVARIAN CREAM

2 envelopes gelatin 1-2 cup coffee

1 cup confectioners' sugar 1 cup milk

1 tablespoon instant coffee 2 egg whites, beaten stiff

2 cups heary cream, whipped 1 tablespoon rum

14 teaspoon vanilla oil for mold

 Dissolve gelatin in coffee and set aside.

 Bring sugar and milk to a boil, remove from heat, add instant coffee and gelatin, and stir well. Set aside to cool.

 Fold in stiffly beaten egg whites and whipped cream.

 Flavor with rum and vanilla and pour into an oiled melon mold.

 Cover and place in refrigerator until following day.

Unmold by dipping into hot water.

 Serve plain or with whipped cream or with coffee-flavored chocolate sauce.

order. Oh well. Enchantment has its price and Joe still has his job. It is the really daring hostess, however, who will brave weekend guests. Sometimes, of course, you must particularly when an old friend you haven't seen for years is in town with a new husband, Mary was always a bright one and is now something of a celebrity; she writes children's books or something. So, remembering that the girl never got anywhere on time in her life, you ask her for Friday mid-afternoon, knowing perfectly well she won't arrive until seven. You were wrong; she sails in the driveway at eight-thirty, cuts a swath through your lilies of the valley, and almost runs down the cat. But it's lovely to see her, she's as dear as ever, and the husband seems likely enough. After dining on a ruined roast, they go immediately to hed; they're dead they've spent the previous week with people you don't know and did nothing but drink champagne and eat caviar and dance the night away. With a feeling that this weekend will be a bit of a change for them, you go to hed, too, wondering how Mary can be so tired and still keep the telephone humming far into the night, Long-distance calls, as you will discover next month, obviously restore her,

There are more trying guests than Mary, of course—the enter-tainment-and-menu-upsetters who not only loathe television, croquet, igsaw puzzles, sea food, canasta, and beer but are allergie to dogs, asparagus, and chocolate. And when Dr. Miles, your minister, pops in to borrow a book, there's always a joker who thinks that anyone called Doctor is a veterinarian and regales him with a story that would curl you hair.

The what-should-I-wear girl is a darling, too. After you've hinted that on Saturday night people dress up a little, down she comes in a kind of hop-sacking mun munthis, presumably, because she insists on helping you in the kitchen ("You look anfully tired, dear"). She helps all right; she also breaks your best spode teapot.

But all of them, eventually, no home, and then comes that blessed, quiet moment when you can bring the dog up from the basement, turn on the television, retrieve the chocolate cake from the freezer, and make a vow. I think you know what it is.
